It is important to prepare for emergencies such as terrorism, fire, hazardous materials spills, power outages or natural disasters.

AWARENESS

Awareness about the safety risks in your home by following these preparedness measures will help to reduce deaths, injuries and property damage. Organize your household to be prepared for the next emergency or disaster and encourage the commitment of every family member.

UTILITIES

- Learn how to locate and shut-off (if necessary) water, gas and electricity.

EMERGENCY PLAN

- Create an evacuation plan that includes two exits out of every room in the home.
- Designate a family meeting place.
- Practice until everyone knows the plan and feels confident with it.
- Consider any special needs for the members of your household.
(Infants & small children, the elderly or disabled, and family members that may not speak English)

FAMILY CONTACT

Establish an out-of-state contact person to provide family members the ability to check in and receive messages. Following a disaster, even when regular telephone service resumes, out of state calls will be easier to place and will help to minimize the demand on local phone service lines.

Everyone should know the contact phone number and e-mail address. For school-aged children, write the number in their binder or backpack or include information on school emergency form.

PERSONAL INFORMATION

- Maintain a medical history information sheet for each household member.
- Verify that you have adequate insurance (life, disability, health, home, auto and other property).

MAINTAINING EMERGENCY KIT AND PLAN

- Make a schedule of what emergency kit items need to be inspected or replaced on a regular basis.
- Update emergency plan information as needed. Verify all information is current at least annually.
- Keep practicing and ensure that your plan is realistic and compatible with your changing needs.

PREPAREDNESS WHILE AWAY FROM HOME

Plan for emergencies in places where your family spends time (school, workplace, place of worship, etc.) Discuss what children should do if at school. Coordinate so there is an alternate person to pick-up children and list them on school emergency form.
